

Colors of the New World

Rediscover the heritage of famous Bohemian glass with new products from the Harrachov Glassworks. Founded in the deep woods of Bohemia's highest mountains in a remote area once called the New World, the Harrachov Glassworks began its remarkable journey back in 1712. Over the past centuries, the glassworks has developed unique glassmanufacturing techniques that survive and flourish to this day.

Colorful Is the New Black

> Our handmade glassware is blown into thick wooden molds and shaped using skills that have been passed down for generations. Leading glass artists of their time have always played an important part in our product development. And now, with the help of contemporary artists, the factory is taking the bold step of introducing a new range of colorful glassware that will decorate any table setting for even the most special occasions.

Petr Novosad owner We continue to make glass by hand and melt exceptional colors much like 300 years ago.

EACH SET FEATURES ALL SIX COLORS

We are building upon the legacy and craftsmanship of a glassworks nestled deep in the Krkonoše Mountains, in a location known as the New World. This beautiful region has always been inhabited by people who could hold a hot glassmaker's pipe despite the harsh climate and adversity. We provide the design, and the great local management and glassmakers have the skills to melt and refine the most vibrant glass in the country. In our context, design is a collaborative effort involving dialogue with both salespeople and craftspeople. The development and production workflow in this setting has achieved a harmonious balance.

Design Through the Ages

The well-preserved archive and diverse collection of historical items from the glassworks have been a great source of inspiration for us. This work also carries a significant responsibility. In our work, we relish uncovering ageless, effective solutions and adapting them to meet the demands of modern society. We seek out overlooked techniques and products developed by distinguished designers of the Harrachov Glassworks, who have often been passed over by history, and we bring their products back to the table. Our partnership with the glassworks is dedicated to showcasing new dimensions of these aesthetically pleasing items of exceptional quality and practicality.

LLEV head of design

The Harrachov Glassworks benefits from 300 years of tradition, a vast archive of exceptional items, as well as the phenomenal craftsmanship which this New World company has been passing down from generation to generation. Keeping and cultivating this legacy is a difficult job, in fact just barely short of a miracle. Ninety percent of the local glass production is furthermore shipped around the world – appearing on both casual and festive tables, exhibition showcases, as well as the showrooms and retail shops of some of the world's foremost brands.

A Miracle Born of Sand & Fire

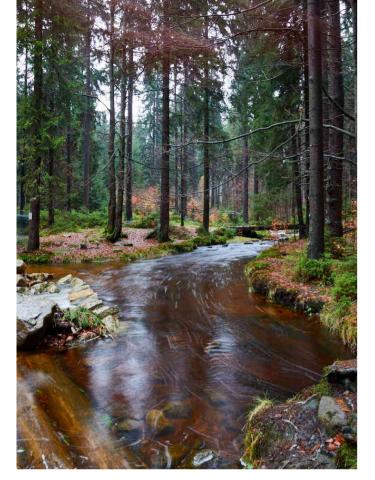

The glassware serves its purpose but, in today's fast-paced world, it also inspires us to stop and reflect on the value of handcraft and on the fascinating saga of people coming to use fire and sand in the production of an aesthetically valuable item. Harrachov glass is more than a mere historical label, so in order for it to succeed on an international market, it must also innovate and develop further while constantly keeping in view and respecting its tradition. The selected glassware sets made in collaboration with contemporary designers are the best guarantee that the Harrachov Glassworks is on its way to further centuries of successful development and production.
